Designed to lend modernity to suburban living, this Stamford home features a clean palette with bright pops of coral, black and blue as well as fun modern art mixed in. "This living space has a great sense of openness and ease," says Jamie Drake, one of the A-List judges. "All around, it's a room that invites you in." The designer paired catalog items with local artisan finds, and the result is a seamless uncluttered interior.

A young family in Greenwich wanted a design that would be casual yet elegant, sophisticated but family friendly. Designer Michelle Morgan Harrison, a former fashion editor, chose a palette of rich, deep colors to harmonize with natural fabrics such as linens, burlaps, grasscloth and sisal. Family-focused elements include the built-ins for stashing toys, stain-resistant fabrics and a giant chalkboard. "I love the mix of fashion-inspired colors in this space, the teal draperies, persimmon X benches and mix of natural textures," says Celerie Kemble.
